Harry Potter and Torah by Dov Krulwich, Paperback | Barnes ...

In Harry Potter, each character owns a wand, sees many magical plants and animals, receives mail by owl delivery, and completes household chores using magic. Magic, in the world of Harry Potter, is performed daily by everyone. On the contrary, in the Torah, magic is not an every day event. It can only be performed by God or certain prophets. The Torah even discourages any kind of witchcraft or magic. Even so, there is magic in the Torah, like in Harry Potter.

Comparing Harry Potter and the Torah - JMORE

Is the magic in Harry Potter the same kind of sorcery prohibited by the Torah? After all, in the world of Harry Potter, there are wizards, muggles and squibs. In other words, you're either born with the gift or you aren't. Harry intuitively performed acts of magic before he even knew he was a wizard.
